Next to every Whisky is a two part (a letter and a number) code. These correspond to some general flavour profiles (FP)

1. Light cask influence (Bourbon or light wine)
2. Medium cask influence, perhaps a finish in red wine or sherry
3. Heavy cask influence, likely full maturation in sherry or red wine

- A. No Peat
- B. Some Peat
- C. Heavily Peated

Our Whisky menu has Whisky distilleries arranged traditionally, by region to make it easiest to find your favourite distilleries.

We hope this makes it easier however, if its all still a bit daunting don't hesitate to ask one of our staff or simply wander to the bar for a look over the selection.

Islay

Long associated with smoky whiskies, it's well known now that Islay is by no means a one trick pony. Islay produces whiskies all along the smoke spectrum, from the heavily medicinal distilleries on the southern Kildalton Coast, to the completely smoke free numbers from Bunnahabhain and Bruichladdich.

Our pick of the Islay distilleries is Bunnahabhain, not simply because of their versatility making both unpeated and smoky drams, but because of the sheer variety of casks they so creatively use.

Highland

As the highland scene diversifies more and more, we've chosen to highlight a new distillery here. Ardnamurchan comes from the peninsula of the same name; the most westerly point of the UK mainland. Ardnamurchan's house style - as reflected in the AD release - is born of some clever in house blending. The distillery makes peated and unpeated spirit and ages in a variety of casks.

Speyside

Speyside is home to more distilleries than anywhere else in Scotland, including Scotland's biggest distilleries, some of its best known and some of its best liked. Glen Moray is a classic Speysider - fruity, with plenty of vanilla-like sweetness and a nice touch of Glen Moray's spirit is nuanced and gentle yet robust, standing up well to almost any type of cask. We're fortunate enough to stock Glen Moray in a huge range of casks, including sherries, wines and port.

Campbeltown

Once the Whisky Capital of Scotland, it is home now to just three distilleries - though fortunately one of two more are in the works. Glen Scotia, despite being one of the country's smallest distilleries, has taken home a host of gongs recently; including Best Distillery and World's Best Whisky during last year's awards season. We've chosen to highlight them because we love them, and not just because it's so difficult to get anything from their neighbours...

Lowlands

A region that is seeing a huge resurgence, the Lowlands' new distilleries are talking the traditional Lowland style - light, fruit-forward drams - and using modern production and maturation techniques to hone their whiskies into some of the most clear cut and fresh drams around. We've chosen to highlight Kingsbarns, who are near St Andrews. The distillery was originally the vision of a local caddie, hence the name of their expersion.

Islands

While The Islands aren't technically a region - falling instead mainly into the Highlands - it is an easy way to section off these slightly different whiskies. We've chosen to shine a light on Arran distillery - producing peated and unpeated spirit and filling many different cask types, they provide a huge range of whisky that still stays true to their distillery style.

Blends and the Rest of the World

With the much-welcomed decline in Single Malt Scotch snobbery, other categories are getting their time in the sun. We're thrilled to be able to stock a great range of blended Whisky as well as Whiskies from nearly every corner of the globe. It turns out that anyone with grain, water and a copper kettle can make the stuff - yes, even England.
